Mission

Our mission is to ensure that state and federal laws affecting poor people are upheld, while also addressing the systemic barriers to justice faced by Mainers with low incomes.

Approach

We provide free civil legal assistance in cases where legal aid can make a difference in one's ability to attain basic human needs or enforce basic rights, including access to housing, food, income, safety, education, and healthcare.

In 2020, the coronavirus pandemic revealed what our frontline staff see every day:
the extreme inequalities in our state.

Structural inequalities implicate health, housing, employment, education, and even access to the civil justice system.

A CLOSER LOOK →

In January 2020, “Jennifer” started a new job working as an optician at a local eye doctor’s office. Jennifer is a single mom of three, living in a small Maine town. Before starting her new job, she had fallen behind on rent and entered into an agreement with her landlord to catch up on payments. When COVID-19 hit Maine in March, Jennifer was cut down to 8 hours a week and she could no longer afford her current or past due rent.

Initially, Jennifer’s landlord said he would work with her, but after accepting money from her tax return and stimulus check, he asked local police to remove her from her home.

One day in June, Jennifer came home from work to find a notice hanging on her door that said she must leave within 48 hours. In the middle of the pandemic, her landlord threatened to have the police throw her and her kids onto the street.

Jennifer called Pine Tree Legal Assistance for help. She asked us if this was legal. She wasn't sure what rights she had.

One of our staff attorneys, Lynn, researched the case and identified a legal defense. Lynn drove out to the local court to request an emergency temporary restraining order (TRO) to stop the landlord from illegally evicting Jennifer.

The court granted the order and Lynn immediately notified the landlord and the local police that Jennifer and her kids could stay in their home.

If Pine Tree Legal Assistance had not intervened, three children and an adult would have been left without shelter in the midst of a pandemic. This would have resulted in immediate health and safety risks.

Laws only work when they are enforced. Pine Tree Legal Assistance helps local families enforce laws designed to prevent housing discrimination, ensure free appropriate public education, protect low wage worker, and prevent financial exploitation. Your support of Pine Tree Legal Assistance provides free legal help to Mainers who would not otherwise have access to a lawyer.

“The law is complicated and, without Pine Tree’s help, many families who have a right to stay in their homes will be unfairly evicted.”
